

International migration and regional housing markets: Evidence from France

Published on October 14, 2019 – Updated on November 26, 2019

Dates

on the October 14, 2019

Focus on Research

International migration and regional housing markets:

Evidence from France

Macroeconomic evidence suggests that immigration has no significant effect on property prices in France, but that higher property prices significantly reduce international migration.

Read in French(/toutes-les-actualites/zoom-sur-la-recherche/l-immigration-en-france-quels-effets-sur-le-marche-du-logement--172429.kjsp?RH=1505391225734)

About the authors

Hippolyte d'Albis

Director of research at CNRS, Professor, École d'économie de Paris.

Ekrame Boubtane

Associate Professor, Université Clermont Auvergne, CNRS, CERDI, F-63000 Clermont-Ferrand, France.

D

A

re, Researcher at EconomiX.

Reference

D'Albis, H., Boubtane, E., Coulibaly, D. (2019). "International migration and regional housing markets: Evidence from France(<https://journals.sagepub.com/doi/abs/10.1177/0160017617749283?journalCode=irxa>)", International Regional Science Review, Vol. 42(2), 147-180.

<https://cerdi.uca.fr/english-version/news/news/research-focus/international-migration-and-regional-housing-markets-evidence-from-france>(<https://cerdi.uca.fr/english-version/news/news/research-focus/international-migration-and-regional-housing-markets-evidence-from-france>)