

Community health workers: A key role in healthcare improving

Published on February 15, 2019 – Updated on February 15, 2019

Dates

on the February 15, 2019

Focus on Research

Community health workers: A key role in healthcare improving

The remoteness of the health centers and the shortage of medical staff are causes of the delay in access to early diagnosis and appropriate treatment of pneumonia. The evaluation of the integration of pneumonia management at the community level shows that this strategy is efficient and could reduce infant mortality.

Read the blog in French

About the authors

Marilys Victoire Razakamanana

Post-doctoral Fellow, Fondation Croix-Rouge française, Université catholique de Madagascar

Martine Audibert

Director of Research at CNRS, Université Clermont Auvergne, CNRS, IRD, CERDI, F-63000
Clermont-Ferrand, France

Voahirana Tantely Andrianantoandro

Associate Professor, Université catholique de Madagascar

Aina Harimanana

Researcher, Unité d'épidémiologie, Institut Pasteur de Madagascar

Reference

Razakamanana, M.V., Audibert, M., Andrianantoandro, V. T., Harimanana, A. 2019. « Impact et efficacité de la prise en charge de la pneumonie dans celle du paludisme à Madagascar », Revue économique, 7, 377-402.

