In Egypt, the Arab Spring has been a massive popular revolution, very unpredictable and characterised by an active participation of women. This revolution has moved forward until the households, where women exposed to the revolution have raised their bargaining power.

Read in French

About the authors

Olivier Bargain
Professor in Economics, University of Bordeaux.

Delphine Boutin
Associate Professor in Economics, University of Bordeaux.

Hugues Champeaux
Reference